A reserve officers' engineer school is located in Karlovac, Croatia. During the summer of 1954 the school was attended by an engineer regiment [] believed to be the 333rd regiment. The commander of this regiment was Lt. Col. Vicki Pejovic. A high school education is required to enroll for the training course of one year. After the initial one year training in the handling of explosives, mines, bridge building and field fortifications, students are required to take a two month course each successive year.
